EIGHT SUMMER HIGHLIGHTS

USA SERIES 1 / CRYSTAL SHARD

These highlights show where USA Crystal Shard prices strengthened this summer. It's the cards that do not always get the attention that give the best context clues. Some people even get steals, like the PSA 9 Spider Knight. Hopefully you have your eBay notifications set!

PRINTING: CHECK THE CARD BACK

Some PSA labels omit a country and can be mistaken for USA. Our reviewed Funk Ops PSA 9 had an unqualified label but an Italy-printed reverse. This is a documented Fortnite mismatch, not a measured Black Knight error rate.

Documented printing example

REGRADING CAN COUNT A CARD TWICE

A crystal shard card submitted under a new certificate can remain counted under its old record unless that record is retired. Population counts will forever be inflated to some degree.

SUMMARY & ESTIMATE

Taken together, printing-label errors and repeat submissions suggest the reported USA population may exceed the number of unique, correctly identified cards. FTC Hub estimates roughly 10% inflation as an unverified editorial assumption. Official counts above remain unadjusted.

NEW CARDS. WILD TIMING. A CHASE THAT CONTINUES.

Fortnite’s first cards arrived just before the collecting boom. Then came the PSA rush, the grading freeze and the hunt for the right USA shard.

2019 / THE BEGINNING A Target shelf, a $19.99 Mega Box, and a new collection. FTC Hub recalls discovering Fortnite cards and opening that first Crystal Shard. [7]	2020 / THE COLLECTING BOOM Collecting gave people something to look forward to at home. Across all trading cards, eBay’s domestic sales rose 142% over 2019 as the hobby found a much bigger audience. [3]	2021 / THE BIG FREEZE The cards kept coming until PSA hit pause. In late March, new Value, Regular and Express submissions went on hold, leaving collectors to wait for those services to reopen. [8]	2026 / SIX-MONTH SEALED HIGH One USA Series 1 Mega Box sold on eBay for AU$3,499 on August 20: US$2,491.46 before shipping in Product Research, the highest single-box sale we located in six months. [10]
---	--	---	--

IT STARTED WITH A BOX

Before the big sales and population reports, there were $19.99 Mega Boxes at Target. FTC Hub’s collecting story started in summer 2019, with a full Fortnite display at Walgreens and, later, that first Crystal Shard from a silver pack. It is a familiar way for a collection to begin: something catches your eye, you open a box, and suddenly you want to find the rest of the set. [7]

Then came 2020. With COVID changing everyday life, collecting offered something to look forward to at home. The wider card hobby grew quickly: eBay reported domestic trading-card sales up 142% that year. Interest rates had fallen to nearly zero, too. Fortnite cards were barely a year old when collecting became a much bigger conversation. [2, 3]

THE PSA RUSH, AND THE WAIT

Finding a card you liked was one thing. Getting it graded soon became a project of its own. In early March 2021, PSA received more cards in three days than it had in the previous three months. By the end of March, new Value, Regular and Express submissions were on hold. PSA kept grading its backlog, but collectors could no longer send cards through those services. [8]

Express reopened in July at $200 a card, while Value stayed closed. That is a substantial grading bill for a pile of fresh pulls. And Fortnite collectors were still figuring out what they had: Series 1 was less than two years old, and completing a clean USA set was already proving difficult. Even after finding the card, there was the cost and wait to consider. [7, 9]

STILL WORTH KEEPING AN EYE ON

Of course, prices did not keep climbing. FTC Hub’s August 2021 video described Mega Boxes falling from a peak near $3,800 to about $1,350. Completing USA sets was still difficult. [7] Later, inflation and higher interest rates gave collectors more reason to watch their spending. [4, 5] But familiar characters still had their appeal, and Fortnite OG brought Chapter 1 back in 2023. [6]

This summer gives collectors something new to talk about. Alongside the selected increases on our cover, Black Knight sold for a reported $100,000 in PSA 10 on Alt. The highest single USA Series 1 Mega Box sale we located was AU$3,499 on eBay on August 20, 2026 - US$2,491.46 in Product Research, before shipping. [10; Chapters 1-3] Quite a change from spotting a box on a Target shelf.

THE COLLECTOR’S EDGE	The right character, printing and condition can take time to find. Knowing what you want before it appears is part of the pleasure of collecting - and a good reason to keep watching this corner of the hobby.
